Cookies

A cookie is a message sent to your browser from a web server that is stored on your computer’s hard drive. The message is sent back to the web server whenever the browser requests a page from that server. Many commercial Internet sites use cookies. While a code in the cookie file enables the site to label you as a particular user, it does not identify you by name or address, unless you have provided the site with such information or set up preferences in your browser to do so automatically. You may opt out of accepting cookies by changing the settings on your browser. However, rejecting cookies may prevent you from using certain functions and you may have to repeatedly enter information to take advantage of services or promotions. In general, cookies allow us to identify you as a particular user and, thus, provide you with a more customized service. We may also use cookies to track or user requests, inquiries, and traffic patterns or to determine audience size and repeated usage. We use web beacons (also known as pixel tags, or transparent GIF files), to help manage on-line advertising. These files enable us to recognize a unique cookie on your web browser, which in turn enables us to learn which advertisements bring users to our website. With both cookies and other technologies to measure and optimize on-line advertising, the information that we collect, and share is anonymous and not personally identifiable. It does not contain your name, address, telephone, nor e-mail address.

When you visit our website, other parties may collect personally identifiable information about your on-line activities over time and across different websites. Notwithstanding any other provision, we may work with third parties who may collect information from you, such as your IP address and information about your browser or operating system and may place or recognize a unique cookie on your browser for the purpose of enabling interest-based content or advertising to you. The cookies placed by our third-party service providers contain no personally identifiable information: they may contain demographic or other Internet-based data in a de-identified form. The information in these cookies may be linked to data you voluntarily have submitted to us, such as your name, postal address, or e-mail, which we may share in hashed or encrypted form. To opt-out of these data provider cookies, please go to <https://youradchoices.com/>.
